

7304 Certificate in Teaching in the Lifelong Learning Sector (CTLTS)

Introduction

7304 is the required qualification for learners wishing to teach on public funded and/or FE courses within an Associate Teacher role. This is the next step up from 7303 Preparing to Teach in the Lifelong learning Sector and provides progression to the Diploma in Teaching in the Lifelong Learning Sector (7305).

Qualification structure

The Certificate comprises three units.
The full qualification must total a minimum of 24 credits.

The units are:

- Planning and enabling learning
- Principles and practise of assessment
- Equality and diversity

What are the entry requirements?

Candidates for this course must have completed 7303 Preparing to Teach in the Lifelong Learning Sector. In addition candidates will need to complete a Level 2 assessment of their Literacy and Numeracy – unless they have O Level (or equivalent passes) in the subject (s). This is arranged and conducted in-house by Aid Training. Candidates for this course should have a good standard of verbal communications skills. Candidates will also be required to have access to, and undertake 30 hours of teaching practice, with a minimum of three hours of observation by the course tutor, or nominated observer.

How long is the course?

Students will need to attend a two day Part 1 course and a two day Part 2 course. These do not have to be consecutive allowing for more time between courses for students to complete their assignments.

How much does it cost?

The cost when attending one of our regular “open” courses is £975 + vat. This includes manuals, certification, tea/coffee and on-going help and support during the course.

We can also run this course at your venue for a total cost of £5000 + vat for up to six delegates. Additional delegates – to a maximum of 12 – would be charged £500 + vat each.
