

First Aid and Instructors Course

This course is designed to enable the successful candidate to train and assess Health and Safety Executive (HSE) approved First Aid courses and Automated External Defibrillation courses.

The course is run over five days and covers two essential areas;

In-depth first aid knowledge-designed to give students the extra knowledge to enable them to train first aid effectively

Teaching and training practice

Under current HSE guidance those training First Aid at Work & Emergency First Aid at Work must meet, as a minimum, the following criteria;

Current, in-date FAW certificate-unless registered General Nurse, Medical Practitioner or State Registered Paramedic

Training qualification and/or relevant experience

Background in first aid within the workplace

This course is in line with the current First Aid Approvals and Monitoring Section, of the HSE guidelines.

Over the week students will complete the three-day First Aid at Work (FAW) course.

You will be assessed and if you pass certified for FAW.

In addition students will receive training and advice in delivering and assessing First Aid courses. Students will also deliver four training sessions each in the course of the week.

These will be assessed, and feedback given to the potential instructor, by a senior member of Aid Training.

First Aid and Instructors Course Continued

On successful completion students will be qualified to train and assess First Aid courses for HSE Registered companies. In addition they will be able to run courses such as AED and Appointed Person – that don't require HSE approval without any external help.

It is important to understand that it is the "company" and not the "individual" that holds HSE approval – there is no such thing as a "HSE Approved First Aid Instructor".

The Instructor qualification may not be a suitable option for everybody, it is well worth contacting us for a no nonsense chat about it before committing yourself to this or any other instructor course. It may in certain cases be that you already meet the criteria to train HSE approved courses and the course may therefore be unnecessary

Cost

The cost of this course when attending an "open" course is £425 + VAT per student. This covers certification, manuals and tea/coffee. In addition all students receive an Emergency First Aid Instructors pack that includes all that is needed to train one-day courses.

The cost of this course is £3250 + VAT for up to 10 students when run at your venue. Additional students are charged at £200 + VAT per person. This includes certification and comprehensive manuals for each student.
